Fr. Thomas J. Morrissey S.J.

Irish Jesuit Mission – its Development 1926 - 2006

This work endeavours to convey something of the reality of the Irish Jesuit Mission in its achievements and short-comings, its joys and sorrows, and of the experience of individual members under the pressure of work in a difficult climate.

It is a very interesting story, often recording turbulent or difficult times involving different characters and personalities yet Jesuits united together in their endeavour to share their faith and love of God in the service of others. The Jesuits became involved in many different areas of peoples' needs, but particularly in education – spiritual and academic, in social work and in media communication.

Over 840 pages and some 200 photos give a lively and interesting account of the caring and sacrificing Irish Jesuit fathers who have served in Hong Kong and adjoining areas for the past 80 years.

About The Author

Thomas, J. Morrissey, S.J.

Thomas J. Morrissey S.J. took a degree from the National University of Ireland in Pure History and subsequently took an M.A. in History and a Ph.D. in the History of Jesuit Education. During his career he was the founder Headmaster of Crescent College Comprehensive, a co-educational Jesuit college in Limerick and later Director of the National College of Industrial Relations in Dublin.

He has published more than eleven books, mainly biographies of men prominent in the Irish Labour movement, of Catholic bishops and of celebrated Irish Jesuits. He has spent three years researching and writing the present book, and as part of the preparation spent more than two months in Hong Kong, studying in the archives, visiting the Jesuit colleges and houses, and also places associated with the Irish Jesuits in Macau and in mainland China.

He is currently researching the career of Archbishop Edward Byrne, who was archbishop of Dublin during the critical early years of the new Irish State, 1921 – 1940.
